Ulwembu connects more Tshwane residents with public TshWi-Fi rollout

Ulwembu Business Services, a South African black-owned ICT services company and Africa's largest public Wi-Fi provider, is making serious advancements in the restoration and expansion of the City of Tshwane's popular public Wi-Fi service ('TshWi-Fi').

Following an intensive assessment of the existing network, Ulwembu has restored most of the non-operational sites, following sub-station damage last year.

Over the next three years, the organisation will roll out an additional 1,000 sites – which will double available hotspots, explains Ulwembu managing director, Sibusiso Kunene.

“Ulwembu has built a strong reputation of helping to transform both private and public enterprises into optimised, digitised organisations over the past 11 years,” states Kunene. “As a company we are passionate about influencing the growth and progression of South Africa.

We are committed to helping businesses and communities move forward by supplying, provisioning, implementing and maintaining the right solutions effectively and affordably so that they can influence, change and improve the lives of the citizens of our country.”

As such, Ulwembu's delivery of the improved TshWi-Fi service includes economic development, in the form of its commitment to using 20 identified local, Tshwane-based suppliers specialising in cabling and field network services for support and maintenance, and implementation of the Wi-Fi network.

“Another critical element to this rollout is youth upliftment, and not only will we roll out value-added services aimed at learners, we have kicked off a youth development programme, which will include mentorship of 20 youth ambassadors over the first year of the project, who are receiving practical, on-ground experience and training.

“As a dedicated partner to the City of Tshwane, it is Ulwembu's intention to assist in ensuring that all the City's wards are connected, delivering an improved service to residents that will allow for greater access to information, education and thus empowerment,” Kunene concludes.
